

INTERNATIONAL ENFORCEMENT LAW REPORTER

Since September 1985, the International Enforcement Law Reporter (IELR) has covered the premier developments and issues in substantive and procedural aspects of international enforcement law.

IELR articles identify and analyze trends in legislative, administrative, and case law developments, with annotations to allow practitioners, policy makers, and academics to use the IELR as a reference tool and a guide to the practice of international law. The IELR also contains information on developments in international enforcement law and international organizations which have not reached the treaty or case law level, such as executive decisions on training and appropriations.

The IELR also publishes quarterly bibliographies pointing to interesting documents, articles, and books, and a popular list of U.S. extradition and mutual legal assistance in criminal matters treaties.

The IELR reports on a number of topics, including:

- Administration of Justice
- Foreign Corrupt Practices Act
- Intellectual Property Law
- Money Laundering
- Drug Trafficking
- Securities Enforcement and White Collar Crime
- Financial Services
- Human Rights
- War Crimes and Genocide
- Asset Forfeiture
- International Tax Law
- Extradition and Prisoner Transfer
- International Courts and Tribunals
- European Union and United Nations Law
